

Handlerz available soon on iPhone and Android

A proximity service finder for your mobile devices

London – 3rd of February 2013. Handlerz is a free application for iOS and Android smartphones, that allows people in need of a good or a service, to be put in contact with persons nearby that can help them. The user-friendly and intuitive design allows users to access efficiently and quickly the service network. To sum it up, Handlerz connects you to people with the relevant skills to answer your needs, at the right time and the right place, so that you can simply reach a win-win deal.

The user posts a request in which he quickly describes his need, when and where the service will take place, and the financial compensation he is willing to grant in exchange for it. All the “handlerz” nearby will be notified of this request, and they can send a help proposal. This proposal includes the amount of the compensation that seems fair and a message for the demander. Before issuing the proposal, the handlerz can also use the chatbox to get in touch with the demander and ask more details about the service if needed. The demander will then pick a proposal among the offers he received, and will be sent the details of the selected user so they can agree on the conditions of the meeting.

“While traveling, did it never happen to you to forget your mobile phone charger? It is more than probable that at this time, someone nearby, in the hotel or in the neighbourhood, would have been happy to lend you their charger for free, or for a small compensation. In these moments, the only thing that is missing to resolve your issue is a tool that creates a link between the person in need of a service, and the ones that could help : the connector”. This is how Stephane Mora, one of the 3 creators of Handlerz among other successful applications, explains the purpose of the application.

Handlerz will soon be available for free on the Google Play Store and the Apple AppStore. For more information on the application, please have a look at our website <http://handlerz.com>
